During the month of September General Georgiev, political advisor to Marshal Sokolovski, departed for Moscow, presumably on vacation. As of 20 October 1947, Skrzypczynski, who had been as close to Georgiev as Nadolny, had had no news of Georgiev's return from Moscow. He is obviously worried, since Georgiev was the chief support of Skrzypczynski in his job as head of the Central Administration for Industry.
